Trial Heat 1/10/05 Elements

DG=Darren Gelber

JAMES: Of Trial Heat and the program. Good to see you Daren

DG: Happy new, good to see you James.

JAMES: Darren Gelber is a criminal defense attorney, rather dapper, good looking guy, so happening. Hate having you on the show Darren but, (inaudible)

DG: With a husband who would appear to be truly concerned with his wife's whereabouts and I think that's a really compelling reason for the prosecutor to have presented this witness' testimony in the way that it was presented.

JAMES: Look how as truly innocent concerned person acted when Ramona wasn't showing up where she was supposed. On the phone to the hospitals, on the phone to the police.

WOMAN: Of course

JAMES: Where is she? Where's the husband, on internet looking for a mattress cover.

WOMAN: Of course.

DG: However, I do think that the judge in recognizing a fourth amendment violation may have determined that evidence would have been seized anyway under a legal concept that we call inevitable discovery.

WOMAN: What do you make of that?

DG: Either he's guilty or he's a very bizarre person. That's the only thing I can of.

WOMAN: Oh come on Darren.
