Samantha Stillo is a Shareholder in the Business and Commercial Litigation group at Wilentz, Goldman & Spitzer, P.A. Ms. Stillo focuses her practice on business litigation, representing businesses and individuals in complex commercial matters. She assists clients with a broad range of legal issues, including breaches of contract, real estate conflicts, legal malpractice, corporate, partnership, and shareholder disputes, franchise-related issues, employment claims (breaches of restrictive covenants), defamation, construction conflicts, and fraud. Samantha manages litigation from its inception, using a strategic and personalized approach to meet her clients' needs and help resolve their legal challenges.

Over the past several years, Ms. Stillo has represented several clients in various legal conflicts, stemming from breach of commercial lease agreements, breach of real estate agreements, title disputes, commercial landlord-tenant disputes, and other issues which often plague individuals and corporations in the commercial real estate industry. Ms. Stillo has helped clients navigate complex legal issues, and carefully guided them through every aspect of their legal situation, oftentimes assisting in obtaining a positive resolution, whether through alternative dispute resolution or litigation.
