Who is the Lawyer Who Will Actually Handle Your Cartiva Case?

11/05/26

If you had a Cartiva Synthetic Cartilage Implant and are looking into a claim, you have probably called or clicked on more than one law firm. Before you sign with anyone, find out who will do the work.

Many of the firms that advertise for these cases never try them. They collect your information and refer your case to another firm. Meet Joshua Kincannon. When you call Wilentz, Goldman & Spitzer, P.A., Joshua is the lawyer who handles your case.

Ask Whoever You're Talking To

Whether it's Joshua or anyone else, ask the following questions.

- Who is the attorney that will handle my case?
- Will that attorney handle it from beginning to end?
- Will my case be referred to another firm?
- What percentage is your fee: one-third or 40%?

You should get a clear, direct answer to each. If you get a vague one, that tells you something.

What the Difference Looks Like

Here is how a typical marketing and referral arrangement compares to working with Joshua.

	Marketing firm, then referral	Working with me
Who handles your case	Often a different firm than the one you called	Joshua Kincannon
Referral or handoff	Common	None. No referral, no handoff
Contingency fee	Often 40%	One-third

Why It Matters

Joshua has spent 26 years litigating against medical device implant manufacturers. These cases are won on detail: the device's history, the company's records, the medical evidence, and how the law applies to all of it. The lawyer who knows your case best should be the one standing up for you, not someone who met your file after a transfer.

That is how we work. You get Joshua for the whole case, and you pay a one-third fee, not 40%.
