We represent a broad range of healthcare providers, and our team serves as general counsel to dozens of healthcare entities, from individual healthcare practitioners to whole healthcare systems. Our lawyers have practiced at the forefront of healthcare law for decades, advising on a variety of emerging developments in health law, such as telemedicine, and Clinically Integrated Networks (“CINs”). Wilentz's experience in the health sector is based on both our knowledge of the law impacting our healthcare clients and our in-depth understanding of the commercial, regulatory, and operational issues involved in building and growing successful healthcare businesses.

We represent physicians, dentists, and other healthcare providers and entities on the formation and structure of their practice and in connection with joint ventures, corporations, partnerships, and limited liability companies. We handle all aspects of sales, purchases, mergers and acquisitions of healthcare entities, and related licensure issues.

We also represent private equity and venture capital funds in connection with acquisitions, dispositions, joint ventures, and investment opportunities in health-related entities.
